2. Only when Students seek support

Remedial Learning Engagement: The college timetable allocated specific lectures for providing remedial support for various theory courses, conducted before examinations.

The remedial program provides targeted assistance in subjects where students may need additional help, offering personalized tutoring and supplemental resources. Through a combination of one-on-one sessions and interactive learning tools, students receive focused instruction tailored to their specific needs. By fostering a collaborative learning environment and addressing individual academic gaps, the initiative aims to enhance student performance and boost overall confidence and success.

Personal counselling - Personal Counseling Session Organized for Student Betterment. The college conducted a personal counselling session to support students' overall well-being and academic success. This session provided a confidential space for students to discuss personal challenges, academic concerns, and career aspirations with trained counsellors. The counsellors offered individualized advice, helping students navigate stress, improve time management, and set realistic goals. Through one-on-one interactions, students received tailored strategies to enhance their personal and academic development. The session emphasized the importance of mental health, self-awareness, and goal-setting. Overall, this initiative aimed to foster a supportive environment and equip students with the skills to achieve both personal and academic success.

3. As an institutionalized activity in accordance with learner needs

Mentoring Program: Mentors are assigned to student-teachers upon completion of the admission process to facilitate their understanding of the coursework. Throughout the program, mentors assist and advise students on various academic tasks, internships, and projects.

The mentoring program aims to achieve the following objectives:

1. Foster a supportive learning environment by building a strong bond between mentors and mentees.
2. Guide student-teachers in successfully completing their theory courses, internships, and assigned projects.
3. Address personal issues of mentees and offer guidance when needed.

Mentoring activities are integrated throughout the coursework. Depending on the needs of student-teachers, mentors engage in activities such as:

- Providing guidance on developing lesson plans
- Conducting demonstration lessons
- Offering basic ICT training as required
- Assisting with writing effective answers
- Recommending reference books for subjects requiring additional support
- Providing support for personal issues as necessary

Workshops for Internship Activities: For internship activities, Student-teachers are oriented for various teaching skills. Micro-teaching skills, demo lessons on cooperative teaching-learning, orientation of theme lessons, orientation of co-teaching lessons, and workshops for writing lesson plans are organized every year in the college

Provision of Academic Support: Along with mentor support, student-teachers are provided help through content enrichment programs. Content Enrichment programs were implemented to enhance comprehension of diverse concepts. These programs are organized based on the requirements of students such as workshops on "Effective Utilization of PowerPoint Presentations in Teaching and Learning", "Creating Online Lesson Plans and Addressing Challenges in Online Practice Teaching", "Training program focused on creating and leveraging Google Classroom".

Student-teachers were equipped with learning materials and resources, including references to online educational content and links to various educational websites through regularly updated library blogs

4. Left to the judgment of the individual teachers

Tutorials - The main goals of a teacher's effective tutorial for pupils should be involvement and clarity. Teachers started by outlining the material's relevance and establishing specific learning objectives, accommodating various learning styles, employing a variety of instructional strategies, including visual aids, practical exercises, and real-world examples. Teachers summarize the main ideas once more, making sure that students have a chance to raise any questions or concerns. This method improves student retention and comprehension while fostering a positive learning atmosphere.

5. Whenever need arises due to student diversity

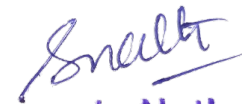

Career counselling- The college hosted a career Counseling session aimed at assisting students with their personal growth and future planning. Professional career counsellors led the seminar, which offered insightful information about numerous career pathways, employment trends, and successful job search techniques. Students took part in interactive talks about networking strategies, interview preparation, and resume writing. The counsellors assisted students in coordinating their academic objectives with their professional aspirations by providing tailored advice based on each student's unique interests and strengths. The program also featured workshops on creating professional goals and looking into internships. The event's overall goal was to provide students with the skills and information they would need to successfully plan and grow their careers.

Resume Making Workshop: A resume-making session was also conducted to assist students in developing their careers. The workshop, which was facilitated by seasoned career counsellors, concentrated on creating strong resumes for teaching and academic careers. Students investigated key components such as Contact Information, Professional Summary, Work Experience, and Education in addition to learning about several resume layouts, such as functional and reverse-chronological. The significance of emphasizing teaching abilities, credentials, and pertinent experiences was also addressed throughout the session. Students received tailored feedback and interactive exercises to help them create resumes that make an impression. Enhancing students' employability and preparedness for the workforce was the goal of the event.
