INTERNSHIP DIARIES

Internship is that special chapter in every teacher trainee's life where the classroom shifts from imagination to reality. At Oriental College of Education, the internship program is not just about applying teaching methods. It's about discovering the teacher within. This year's internship gave our student-teachers a chance to step out of their comfort zones and step into real classrooms filled with curious minds and vibrant energy.

Across various schools like I-Teach (Airoli), I-Teach (Nerul), NMMC Seawoods, SCCT (Sanpada), and Sankul (Sanpada), our interns took on the role of full-fledged educators — designing lesson plans, using creative teaching aids, managing time, and connecting with students from diverse backgrounds. It was here that they truly understood the heart of teaching — not just delivering content, but creating meaningful experiences.

There were nervous first days, uncertain moments, and countless hours of preparation. But there were also smiles of understanding, hands raised with questions, and quiet thank-yous from students — moments that make all the difference. With the support of school mentors and college supervisors, our interns learned to balance confidence with humility and structure with spontaneity.

FROM THE HEART OF THE INTERNS

26TH - 30TH DECEMBER, 2024

Sometimes, the most powerful lessons are not found in textbooks but in the quiet moments of connection, kindness, and care. A recent field experience offered the students of our college just that — a chance to step out of the classroom and into real-world settings that nurtured empathy, awareness, and responsibility.

At Vatsalya Ashram, students engaged with orphaned children and elderly residents, listening to their stories and sharing joyful moments. They also took part in sorting donated items and organizing shelves — small acts carried out with genuine care and purpose.

The field journey further extended to Mini Seashore and the rich biodiversity of the Mangroves Forest, where students actively participated in cleaning drives. These efforts not only contributed to a cleaner environment but also instilled a deeper understanding of sustainability and ecological preservation.

This immersive experience served as a gentle reminder that compassion, service, and awareness are not just concepts, but essential values to live by. Through each interaction and activity, students walked away with more than memories, they carried home life lessons that go far beyond the pages of any syllabus.

8TH AND 9TH APRIL 2025

The Annual Sports Day at Oriental College of Education was not just an event — it was a vibrant celebration of energy, unity, and the joy of movement. The college grounds came alive with excitement as students from all departments stepped onto the field, not only to compete but to connect, cheer, and challenge themselves in new ways.

The day unfolded with a range of events designed to bring out every kind of strength — physical, mental, and emotional. From the heart-pounding thrill of the 100-metre sprint and relay races, to the playful yet competitive rounds of dodgeball and the tricky glass balloon game, each event was met with loud cheers, laughter, and true team spirit. Strategic games like chess and carrom gave students the chance to showcase focus and mental stamina, reminding us that sports is not just about speed, but also about strategy and patience.

Adding to the excitement were crowd favourites like volleyball, badminton, musical chairs, the intense tug of war, and the daring wall high jump. Each game brought energy and laughter, with students encouraging each other and celebrating every effort with joy and pride.

More than just about competition, Sports Day nurtured a spirit of togetherness and confidence. Students discovered new strengths, overcame stage fear, and supported one another — proving that growth happens both on and off the field.

In the end, Sports Day left behind more than medals. It left memories, motivation, and the reminder that education includes movement, teamwork, and the courage to try.

MY DREAMS

I lost my spark as a teen,
Living in these dreadful dreams—
Full of prejudice, persistent pain,
In a world where efforts seem in vain.

It wasn't as easy as I thought,
Life, with all its pros and cons,
I don't know where this journey leads,
But in this lonely field of hope,
I will always find you—
Even if only in my dreams.

In this, we are together, aren't we?
I'm trying, and you are too, honestly.
Let's live—side by side—
Like astronauts in an ocean tide.

All we had was our dream.
We woke up to foggy mornings only,
But all night long, we sang, we danced,
On endless sheets of music,
Hoping the silence would never last.

HOPE TO MY JACK IN THE BOX

When I opened Pandora's box, a holistic angel flew by.
Living with them, day and night—
I became better than I'd ever been.

They gave me the hope to see tomorrow,
but little did I know
the future would go on without them—
for a while.

I might've been a captive
to memories and moments.
But through it all,
I held on—through every shade,
every silence, every storm.

From sunshine to stillness,
from chaos to calm,
something stayed—
forever tucked in my heart.

And so, I call it
the hope to my Jack in the Box.

✕ IN THE QUIET BETWEEN HEARTBEATS ✕

Life moves fast, it doesn't wait, We're chasing dreams, we're chasing fate. Running hard, we try our best, But still, our hearts can't seem to rest.

Impatience knocks, "Why not today?" Anxiety just won't go away. We smile outside, but deep inside, It's like a storm we try to hide.

Some days we win, some days we fall, Some nights, we feel we've lost it all. But in that quiet, gentle space, We feel God's love, we find His grace.

He doesn't shout, He doesn't show, But in our hearts, we somehow know That every prayer, each silent cry, Is heard by Someone in the sky.

So we believe, and hold on tight, Even when things don't feel right. With trust and faith, we plant each dream, And wait for life to find its gleam.

One day the pain will turn to peace, And all the running, it will cease. What we prayed for, worked for, missed out on, Will come to life, just as we wished.

So take a breath, you're doing fine, The stars take time before they shine. Just trust the path, and you will see, You're where you're meant to be.

मैं मणिपुर

भारत मेरा महान है, फिर औरते क्यों गुलाम
है, हजारों लोगो के बीच में रेप होना क्या
आम है।

तीन मई कि खबर थी जो जुलाई में आ
गरमाई है, मणिपुर का कुछ पता नहीं पर
सीमा हैदर आई है।

कभी निर्भया कभी हाथरस कभी मणिपुर
रोई है, सरहद पर तो बेटा खो दे घर में बेटी
खोई है।

रेप हुआ पुलिस के सामने लेकिन हुआ न
कोई कार्यवाई है, मणिपुर का कुछ पता नहीं
पर सीमा हैदर आई है।

कहां सो गया अंधा कानून कहां सोई
सरकार है, सच को सच कहने वाला अब
बचा कहां अखबार है।

जहर तुम्हारा देश कि नस में धीरे- धीरे उतर
रहा है, तीन रंगो के बीच बैठा न्याय का
पहिया सुबक रहा है,

सारे रंग उतर जाएंगे तब बोलोगे, कुछ तो
बोलो, मुंह तो खोलो, कब बोलोगे।

DEAR AMMA

You were strong since I was small,
Always stood up through it all.
Even when the days were tough,
You stayed kind and brave enough.

You gave us food, you gave us care,
You gave us love that's always there.
You never asked for much in turn,
Just love and hugs you truly earn.

Now you feel alone sometimes,
It shows in shouts, in little signs.
We hear your pain, we know it's real,
Even if we don't always feel.

You think we've gone too far away,
But Amma, we're still here each day.
We're just confused, we're growing too,
Still learning how to care for you.

POWER IS CHOICE

I went to business school for my masters and definitely wanted to start something of my own and be a working woman. But soon after I got married and got busy with adjusting in a new family, new situations to deal with. Soon I settled down and thought of starting something of my own. I was just exploring my options and I got the most special news of my life. I was about to welcome a new life in this world. And since I have held him in my arms I just want to be around him all the time. Is there anything really wrong about it?? Very often I am questioned about being a stay at home mother. Often bombarded with questions like "Why don't you think of something and start working"?? "why do you sit at home in spite of having a great education"?? I am constantly told that "being independent is really important in life" "What is the significance of all the effort you put in to get that MBA" And I wonder does independence only refer to being financially independent? We talk about Feminism. According to my personal views feminism refers to "power to women". Power to make their own decisions. Every woman has the right to choose her own path and that is what makes her powerful. I say power to women who work and power to women who don't. Your power is in your choice. I chose to stay at home with my child, to watch him grow everyday, to enjoy his childhood, to watch him learn new things and learn new things with him. I chose to relive my childhood with him. Often I get to hear things like "what was the point of studying so much if you did not want to work" ?? My reply to that would be that I value education and knowledge gained is never a waste. It is never too late to incorporate what you have learned in life, but personally this is not the time for me to start working. Education is only considered knowledge when you apply it. I will incorporate my learnings in my child's life. There is a lot I learned at business school which made me a different hopefully a better person and I am happy to incorporate that in my child's life. I definitely see myself starting my own venture few years down the lane. But right now I feel I have made my choice and "I do not want to be judged on that". Being a working or stay at home mother is an individual's choice, it should not be a parameter to judge one's ability to do something in life. We as a learned society should really stop judging mothers on sensitive topics like being a stay at home mother or a working mother. It's a decision that the mother makes for herself and her child. And the mother knows best. You acquire education to gain knowledge. Knowledge is power. And power is choice.

पहचान

बनेगा जो सास्वत वही आधार होगा,
पहचान तेरा नाम अपितु काम होगा;
आखिरी सांस लेने से पहले, कर हर वो कर्म
जो तेरे अस्तित्व को बनाये,
जाने के बाद तेरे, नाम हर तरफ गूंजा जाए;
एक नाज़ुक से डोर के सिरे से बंधा है जीवन,
देर इतनी ना कर के वक्रत हाथो से निकल
जाए ;

तू है अर्जुन एकलव्य भी तू है,
क्यूं ढूंढे वासुदेव को अपने जीवन रथ का
सारथी भी तू है;
हाथो मे लिए हिसाब तेरा यम कबसे बैठा है,
तू खुद का तराशगीर, क्यों करमो से अब तक
रूठा है;

THE RAIN

Again the Rain Came to the Petrichor
everywhere,
The drop of hope is blessed Somewhere,
She looked here and there, and finally, it was her Smell,
She dances in a blown Breeze Air,
The messy-heavy cloud drifting away.

Again the rain Came, and the Leaf of the

The growing flower gives the best gaze,

The rain came & the Sunshine became

Hope Dear rain, will Become her Bacon of माँ बस एक शब्द नहीं एहसास हैं.

 लाखों अल्फाज़ों में सबसे पाक है.
 रूठे चेहरे पे जो हसी ले आये.
 काम न बनता हो जो वो भी बन जाये.
 खुद गुमसुम रह जो खुशी भर देती है.
 मैं हूँ ना साथ तेरे ये कहती है.
 है ऋतु जो बसंत की नीयत जिसकी साफ़ है .
 माँ एक शब्द नहीं एहसास है.
 देखा है मैंने पल्लू में उसे रूपये दबाते हुए.
 तिल तिल जोड़ बरकत बरसाते हुए.
 थाली की रोटी काम न पड़ जाये ये घबराहट
 लिए
 अपने हिस्से का भी मेरी तरफ़ सरकाते हुए
 बिन मांगे जो दे दे वो सबसे खास है
 माँ एक शब्द नहीं एहसास है

 अब पड़ चुकी है सिकन उम्र की तहलीज़ है

"यादों की उड़ान"

माँ की गोद में जब सिर रखा था,
 वक़्त भी जैसे थम-सा गया था।
 नरम हथेलियों की वो छाँव,
 जैसे तितली की पंखुरी का स्पर्श — बहाव।

बचपन की गलियों में जब दौड़ा करते,
 छोटे-छोटे ख्वाबों को तितलियों संग जोड़ते।
 हर रंग, हर परछाईं में था जादू,
 माँ की मुस्कान और पिता का साया — बस
 वही था वजूद।

पिता की उँगली थाम, जब चलना सीखा,
 हर ठोकर पर उन्होंने खुद को पीछे रखा।
 माँकी लोरी, पिता का हौंसला साथ था,
 बचपन तितली बना, और जीवन एक परवाज़ था।

CHILDISH?

"You still sleep hugging pillows like a child!?"

Yes,

Sometimes it's the only comfort I have
My tears have soaked deep in them
My screams have become muffled in them

Sometime it's the mother I miss

Sometimes it's the person I wanna I waan[a] tell everything

Sometimes it's the child I wanna save (me)

Sometimes it's the only person I have
Yeah

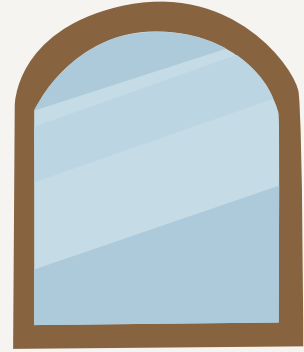

It's just a pillow

It knows my darkest lows

It holds the warmth that I want

That sometimes real people can't... so yes
I sleep hugging pillows

A MIRROR CALLED SOCIETY

We live in walls both high and wide,
With hopes and fears we often hide.
We laugh in crowds, but cry alone,
In houses built of glass and stone.

We teach what's right, yet judge so fast,
We cling to future, mourn the past.
We preach of peace, but fight for pride,
And let our kindness slip and slide.

We dress our truths in quiet lies,
Wear borrowed masks and staged goodbyes.

We chase perfection, fake and bold,
While letting warm hearts turn to cold.

But still, within this noisy place,
Are hands that help, and eyes with grace.
A stranger's smile, a friend who stays—
A light that cuts through darkest days.

Oh society, so flawed, so grand,
Built not by bricks, but heart and hand.
May we be brave to mend, to see—
That change begins with you and me.

Speaking Up: My First Experience with Public Speaking still remember the hush that fell over the auditorium the moment I began to speak. It was the first time I ever held a mic in my hand—back in the 9th standard during our school’s elocution competition. As I stood there, the script slightly crumpled in my hand, something unexpected happened. Instead of panic, I felt a sudden calm. The silence in the room, the attentive eyes of the audience, and the gentle echo of my voice through the mic—it all felt strangely right. That was the moment I discovered something about myself: I loved public speaking. Growing up in the city, I had access to good schools and opportunities, but like many students, I had always assumed that being good at something meant being naturally gifted. That day onstage proved otherwise. Until that moment, I had never thought of myself as particularly confident or charismatic. But the attention and respect I received simply for expressing my thoughts with clarity made me feel empowered. The positive feedback that followed gave me a high I hadn’t expected. Friends, teachers—even students I barely knew—came up to me and said, “You speak so well,” or “You should do this more often.” That encouragement lit a spark in me. From then on, I began volunteering for assemblies, debates, and any chance I got to speak in front of an audience. It wasn’t about showing off—it was about sharing something, connecting with people, and growing more confident with each experience. Now, as I pursue my Master’s in English Literature, I often look back at that moment in 9th grade as the starting point of a journey. I find myself surrounded by articulate, fluent speakers, and while it can sometimes feel intimidating, the voice inside me—the one that first found its strength on that school stage—reminds me that I belong here too. I’m not starting from scratch; I’m building on a foundation I laid years ago. I continue to refine my skills. I read aloud to improve my intonation and pronunciation. I listen to podcasts and speeches, expand my vocabulary, and challenge myself to speak up in class—even when self-doubt creeps in. And it’s paying off. Whether it’s a seminar on postcolonial literature or a discussion on Shakespeare, I’m growing into someone who not only has ideas—but can also voice them with confidence. Looking back, that first experience in 9th standard was more than just a school event—it was the beginning of discovering my voice. Public speaking, I’ve come to learn, isn’t just about perfect grammar or flawless delivery. It’s about connecting, expressing, and evolving. Today, whenever I see someone hesitating to speak, I think of that version of me—nervous, unsure, but brave enough to step up. And I remind them, as I remind myself: The mic may amplify your voice, but it’s your courage that makes it worth listening to.
